

On Lake Koshkonong:

The time is now for the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources to grant the petitioner's request to raise water levels (Page 1A, Sunday). Scientific evidence and economic data support the request. Seven inches of water can have a dramatic economic impact on the lives of many in Dane, Rock and Jefferson counties.

-- All that boating is very inefficient and has a high rate of pollution. Instead of boating, maybe they should say polluting the water and air we live in and the fish in the water. They should remove the dams on that river, let the lake return to a swamp like it was and give back to the animals and their future generations. Everything doesn't have to be about money.
